

New DVDs: The critic's choice

By Dave Kehr
New York Times

With its two-dimensional figures and flattened perspectives, the Walt Disney classic "Sleeping Beauty" imitates the look of an illuminated manuscript from the Middle Ages, but its bright, buzzing colors — aquamarine, chartreuse, magenta, goldenrod — are unmistakably those of midcentury America. It's as if a Book of Hours had been crossbred with an Amana appliance catalog.

Those colors practically soar off the screen in the new Blu-ray version of "Sleeping Beauty" that Disney released last week, making it the first of this studio's reissues to appear in that new, high-definition format. It's an appropriate choice, given that "Sleeping Beauty" was itself a product of a high-definition technology of its time, shot in a process, Super Technirama, that yielded 70-millimeter prints with an aspect ratio almost as wide as that of Cinerama.

With six-channel stereo sound (remixed to DTS 7.1 for the Blu-ray release, though the original tracks are also included), "Sleeping Beauty" thundered forth on Jan. 29, 1959, an imposing embodiment of American technology at its grandest and most self-confident.

In the works for almost eight years, with a budget of $6 million, staggering at the time, the film was meant as a triumphant return to the epic scale of "Pinocchio" and "Fantasia." Disney animators had drifted through the 1950s with the diminished resources and shrunken ambitions of films like "Alice in Wonderland" (1951) and "Peter Pan" (1953).

For audiences of the period, however, the picture proved to be a bit too grand and too remote. Scolded by critics for its generic characters and relative lack of warmth and humor, "Sleeping Beauty" returned less than half of its investment and ushered in another era of austerity at the studio. Disney animation turned to the small-scale, sitcom-type format of films like "One Hundred and One Dalmatians" (1961), and "Sleeping Beauty" would prove to be the studio's last animated feature based on a fairy tale until its loose adaptation of "The Little Mermaid" in 1989.

More significantly, perhaps, it was the last Disney film to be hand-inked on animation cels, rather than transferred, by photocopying, from the animators' sketches and paintings. Henceforth, the handmade element — unevenly applied color fields, broken lines and even the occasional greasy fingerprint — would disappear from the Disney universe, eternally to be missed.

The Blu-ray "Sleeping Beauty" is so sharp that it is occasionally possible to glimpse the tiny shadows cast by misaligned cels, which adds a welcome humanizing factor. But otherwise the digital restoration has eliminated all stray dust motes and turned the color fields into perfectly solid blocks. ("Sleeping Beauty" is also being issued in a standard-definition version, and Disney has included a copy of the standard disc in the Blu-ray box as well.) The effect is to turn a cold film into something slightly, subliminally colder.

According to the opening credits, this "Sleeping Beauty" was inspired by Charles Perrault's 1697 version of the fairy tale, with other narrative elements drawn from the Russian ballet of 1889, scored by Tchaikovsky. But it is also a film of its time, with themes of adolescent romanticism and rebellion taken from the emerging teenage melodramas of the late '50s. Released the same year as Delmer Daves' "Summer Place," the Disney film offers a Beauty — Princess Aurora — whose long, blond hair and perky demeanor come from the same California cauldron as the Mattel Barbie doll (born March 9, 1959) and Sandra Dee's Gidget.

When Aurora (with the beguiling voice of Mary Costa) meets her Prince Phillip (Bill Shirley) in a bower populated by sweetly anthropomorphized animals (who seem to belong to an earlier period of Disney animation), they instantly fall in love, and no amount of parental protest is going to keep them apart. Phillip's father caves in immediately to his son's expressed desire to marry a peasant girl. (Her royal identity has not yet been established.) But overcoming the objections of Maleficent (Eleanor Audley), the evil sorceress who functions as a malevolent mother figure, requires more active opposition. Maleficent transforms herself into a dragon — "Now you shall deal with me, O Prince, and all the powers of hell!" — for a climactic battle with Phillip that features the film's most spectacular animation.

Both the Blu-ray and standard versions are two-disc sets that come with a plethora of extras. For the adult cinephile, there are an excellent commentary track featuring John Lasseter of Pixar, the critic Leonard Maltin and the Disney animator Andreas Deja; a 43-minute documentary on the film's making; a complete Disney television special from 1959, "The Peter Tchaikovsky Story"; and the Oscar-winning documentary short, James Algar's "Grand Canyon" (29 minutes of ravishing widescreen images of the natural wonder of the title, set to Ferde Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite") that was shown in theaters with "Sleeping Beauty" in its first-run engagements.

For the little ones the overstuffed set offers a music video of Emily Osment performing the film's signature song, "Once Upon a Dream"; a cluster of games; a tour of the "Sleeping Beauty" attraction at Disneyland, now shuttered; and the ominously titled "Dragon Encounter Audio Sensory Experience," which may be better left to the imagination.

Disney is also using the Blu-ray "Sleeping Beauty" to push the company's new BD Live technology, which requires an Internet connection. Every time I tried to load it on my desktop computer, my software player choked on the 58-page "End User's License Agreement" and crashed, so I don't know how well the new features work. But I'm not enchanted with the concept: the promotional material says that BD Live will allow little viewers to exchange text messages while they are watching the movie; create video clips of themselves and inject them directly into the film; and play a trivia game using a chat function.

Has Disney decided that American youth suffers from an excessively long attention span? Things have come to a curious pass when children have to be entertained during their entertainment. (Walt Disney Studios Home Entertainment, Blu-ray, $34.99; standard-definition, $29.99, G)

ALSO OUT ON TUESDAY 'INDIANA JONES AND THE KINGDOM OF THE CRYSTAL SKULL'

The long-delayed fourth installment of the "Indiana Jones" saga arrives on DVD in three flavors: single-disc standard definition ($34.99), double-disc "special edition" ($39.99) and Blu-ray ($39.99). "The busy story makes enormous effort to keep the mood happy and snappy and decidedly PG-13 friendly," Manohla Dargis wrote in The New York Times in May. (Paramount Home Entertainment, PG-13)

'THE UNIT: Season 3'
Max Martini, Robert Patrick and Regina Taylor star in David Mamet's CBS series about a team of covert anti-terrorist operatives. (Fox, $39.98, not rated)

THE ULTIMATE MATRIX COLLECTION
All three of the Wachowski brothers' "Matrix" movies, and the animated collection "The Animatrix," now remastered for Blu-ray. (Warner Home Video, $129.95, R)

'WAR, INC.'
John Cusack stars as an international assassin with a budding guilt complex in Joshua Seftel's satire. "Gonzo moviemaking with a bleeding heart," Stephen Holden called it in his May review in The Times. (First Look, $28.98, R)

real estate to the highest bidder for cash. The property to be sold is located at 3301 Ciniza Drive, Gallup, and is situated in McKinley County, New Mexico, and is particularly described as follows:

Lot Twenty-Two (22) in Block Seven (7) of INDIAN HILLS SUBDIVISION UNIT ONE (1), an addition to the town of Gallup, McKinley County, New Mexico, as the same is shown and designated on the map of said subdivision filed in the office of the County Clerk, McKinley County, New Mexico on November 14, 1957

THE FOREGOING SALE will be made to satisfy a judgment rendered by the above Court in the above-entitled and numbered cause on August 23, 2008, being an action to foreclose a mortgage on the above-described property. Subsequent to the entry of the judgment, the Debtor made payments pursuant to a Forbearance Plan and partially satisfied Plaintiff's judgment. The amount now due on the judgment is $153,265.41 and the same bears interest at 6.37500% per annum from October 1, 2008, to the date of sale. The amount of such interest to the date of sale will be $455.07. The Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit its bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash. The sale may be postponed and rescheduled at the discretion of the Special Master.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the real property and improvements concerned with herein will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein, and all recorded and unrecorded special assessments and taxes that may be due. Plaintiff and its attorney disclaim all responsibility for, and the purchaser at the sale takes the property subject to, the valuation of the property by the County Assessor as real or personal property, affixture of any mobile or manufactured home to the land, deactivation of title to a mobile or manufactured home on the property, if any, environmental contamination on the property, if any, and zoning violations concerning the property, if any.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the purchaser at such sale shall take title to the above described real property subject to a one (1) month right of redemption.

Peabody Western Coal Company currently has an opening for three Electrician Trainees. The intent of this position is to enable individuals with Electrical Experience and/or Education to work until they are able to take the Mine Safety Health Administration (MSHA) test to become qualified individuals and work as Electricians at a Surface Coal Mine. This position will enable the incumbents to be exposed to: how to perform electrical repairs, installation, inspections, and preventative maintenance of the electrical power distribution system, the drives and controls on the equipment throughout the operation, including all buildings on the mine site as well as the applicable laws and codes. Training will provide them with basic knowledge to prepare them for a final electrical certification.

Electrician Trainee shall pass an electrical certification after they have completed training, minimum of 6 months and pass the MSHA electrical certification maximum of 12 months after training has begun.

High school graduate, G.E.D. equivalent, or comparable education and experience is required; additional technical training preferred. A minimum of five (5) years of electrical experience with high voltage, drives and controls, or large rotating equipment is preferred, preferably in a mining operation. This position requires the ability to read instructions and write legibly in English. The successful candidate must pass a job related test to establish the aptitude and ability to perform the requirements related to this training position.

The individual must be extremely safety conscious and a self-motivated team player with a desire to enhance department efficiency. This vacancy is on 1st (8am-4pm) and 2nd (4pm-12am) and 3rd (12am-8am) shifts and the incumbent must be able to work different shifts and overtime as required.

This is an hourly, non-exempt position. The incumbent will typically be scheduled to work a 40 to 48 hour workweek at a current wage rate of 23.485 per hour. The benefit package for this position includes a pension plan, 401(k), plus medical, dental and vision.

To apply for this challenging and rewarding position please send a cover letter and resume to:
